PROBLEM STATEMENT

The employee scorecard was invented in the 1990s to solve a problem that most businesses struggle with – keeping employees engaged, motivated, happy, and productive in alignment with the company's goals and mission and having a tangible way to measure employees' progress.

PROJECT OVERVIEW

You can use PerformancePoint Dashboard Designer to create scorecards for your dashboards. A scorecard can be thought of as a kind of report that is designed to show at a glance whether performance is on or off target for one or more key performance indicators (KPIs).

WHO ARE THE END USERS?

Think about how coaches use scorecards in sports. They track how a player is doing faced against several challenges. The pitcher, the pitches, the setting, and even the weather affect their performance. The team's staff compiles this information to guide the individual's training and place them on the roster. Winning the game is the ultimate goal.
